Q: how to manage a mysql database with myisqld driver in python i am trying to create a very simple python application to compare 2 mysql databases, i need to use the mysql database. I create a python script and i have to execute this python script in order to copy and compare the 2 databases. when i execute the script i have this error : DatabaseError: Error: Access denied for user 'root'@'localhost' using password: YES! while connecting to MySQL server. I have no idea what the problem is. I suspect that the user root@localhost does not exist in the database. I try also by connecting with different database just with the same error. So what should i do? The script only need to copy the database and do not need to create any table or add anything but still have this error. A: The error makes sense to me, since you are trying to connect to a MySQL database in the same MySQL database which you are executing the script from. You could write a program which connects to your MySQL database, gets a list of databases with myisqld_list_databases() and executes myisqld_dump_db() and myisqld_drop_db() for each database in the list.
