What's new:

(Star Trek: Enterprise) "The Fallen" is the tenth episode of the second season of the American science fiction television series Star Trek: Enterprise. It first aired on January 10, 2003. The episode was written by Rick Berman & Brannon Braga and was directed by

Winrich Kolbe. Set in the 23rd century, the series follows the adventures of the first Starfleet starship Enterprise, registration NX-01. In this episode, a crew member aboard the ship has a fatal accident while others on the Enterprise are changed. "The Fallen" was watched by 5.96 million viewers. It received generally positive reviews for its writing and acting, although there were some criticisms towards the plot. Reviewers also felt that some plot flaws were solved in later episodes. The episode was nominated for three Emmys: for co-producers Brannon Braga and Fred Steiner, for cinematography, and for music. Background The episode was originally assigned to Skip Beyer. Beyer was still participating in the development of Enterprise second season after having completed the production of the previous season's finale "These Are the Voyages..." Beyer returned as consulting producer at the end of second season; this allowed him to begin development of the episode prior to the start of second season. Since this was prior to the pilot being shot and aired, it was highly unusual for a producer, to the extent that Brannon Braga felt it was "perhaps the first time in TV history where someone came in pre-production before even being cast". After Beyer completed work on "The Forgotten", the series was formally picked up for a second season a few weeks before this episode. If possible, the new season would start making its shooting progression before the end of the first season; this would improve scheduling, save money, and provide another opportunity to work on the series with Beyer's involvement. The idea for the structure the episode takes (having a disastrous accident followed by a crisis of faith) was initiated by the scripting of "Terra Prime", a first season episode of Enterprise filmed just prior to the start of this episode's season. According to co-producer Brannon Braga, the idea was later "activated" after Beyer visited the set of another season and was able to convince writers and executives at that the accident would provide the best dramatic foundation for the rest of the episode. During the episode's production, Beyer felt it was important to make Star Trek a regular part of
